

---

ABSTRACT

A' The present invention relates to a method for directly detecting a gene of a target protein to which a drug is bound in a living organism following administration of the drug to the living organism.

---